

A Guide to Support Dental Patients Experiencing Intimate Partner Violence and Exploitation

Dental professionals have a unique opportunity to identify and support their patients who have experienced or are experiencing intimate partner violence (IPV), human trafficking (HT) or exploitation (E). As a result of their experiences, some people may feel a lack of control at the dental clinic (i.e. sitting back in a dental chair, having people touch them).

This resource can help you:

- Understand why dental appointments act as a trigger for some patients
- Identify protocols to implement IPV/HT/E response
- Support patients in having a better visit, including offering referrals to supportive programs

Before the dental appointment

- Review the evidence-based CUES Intervention to initiate conversations on IPV/HT with patients.
- Identify and formalize agreements with local community partners, such as domestic violence programs.
- Engage staff in cultural humility training to understand the experiences of refugees, undocumented individuals, and asylum seekers.
- Ensure that all dental team members understand the organization's processes and protocols.
- Have resources available and ready to distribute to patients universally.
- Ensure that patients can privately disclose IPV to the dental team.
- Identify if an interpreter is needed and offer educational materials in a variety of languages.
- Consider making the dental operatory a more calming environment by playing music and encouraging patients to bring comfort items like a blanket.

During the dental appointment

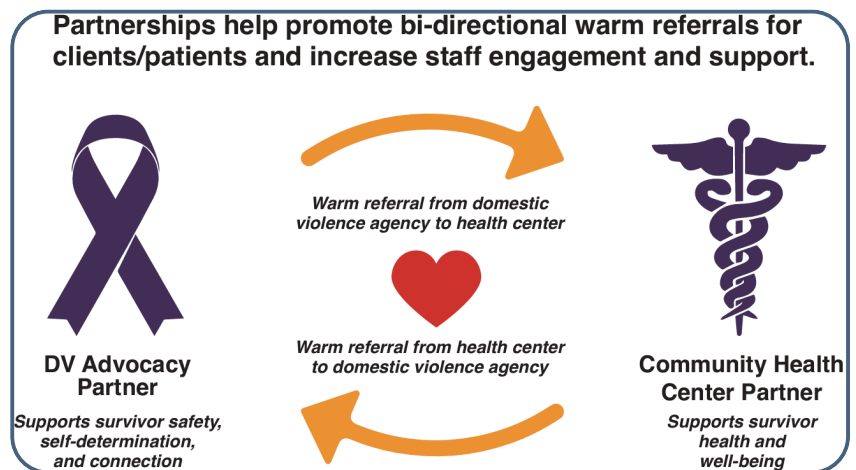

- Create a more comfortable dental experience by introducing yourself and identifying your role in the patient's care.
- Provide a clear explanation of costs, insurance benefits, and confidentiality.
- Recognize that oral health care is naturally invasive and can be triggering for patients with IPV/HT/E experience.
- Initiate conversations on relationships and abuse (see CUES). Validate disclosures of trauma or abuse and their impact on health status.
- Listen to the patient's concerns, worries, and fears. Respect the patient's needs for breaks, discussions, and pace.
- Use the "Tell-Show-Do" approach.
- Describe recommendations and the patient's health status in clear, plain language.
- Provide care navigation and resources to help the patient schedule additional appointments or connect with a community partner.

Community partnerships and referrals

Partnerships between health centers, community-based organizations, and DV advocacy programs provide benefits for health center staff, survivors, and all patients by:

- Promoting bi-directional warm referrals.
- Increasing access to healthcare enrollment and services.
- Connecting patients and staff to DV advocates for safety planning support.
- Addressing intersecting needs like food access, legal support and housing.
- Supporting staff wellness and healing.
